GUIDED MEDITATION RECORDING SCRIPT

A FlamingoRise script designed to sound like an actual human being is talking to you.

The original recording script was short and very soft: find a quiet space, breathe deeply, notice your body, imagine healing pink light, repeat 'I rise. I heal. I soar,' sit in stillness, then carry the calm into your day.

We're keeping the simplicity, the pink-light visual and the FlamingoRise phrase. But this version is written specifically to be recorded aloud, with natural pauses, options for people who don't like closing their eyes or controlling their breath, and none of the promise that a warm imaginary light is literally healing you.

This is not meant to be a twenty-minute spiritual expedition. It is a short reset somebody can actually use.

Recording note: Read more slowly than feels natural. Leave the pauses in. Do not rush to fill silence. The listener needs time to actually do the thing you've just asked them to do.

BEFORE YOU RECORD

Keep it warm. Keep it ordinary. Don't suddenly develop a mystical spa voice. ■

- Read at a comfortable, steady pace.
- Use [PAUSE] as a genuine 3-5 second pause.
- Use [LONGER PAUSE] for roughly 8-12 seconds.
- Keep breaths in the script optional and comfortable - no forced deep breathing.
- Leave enough space after questions for the listener to notice an answer.
- Background music is optional. If you use it, keep it low enough that every word remains clear.
- Record somewhere quiet, but don't bin an otherwise good take because a distant bird dared to exist.

THE RECORDING SCRIPT

Welcome to your FlamingoRise guided reset.

[PAUSE]

For the next few minutes, you don't need to fix anything. You don't need to make a decision. And you definitely don't need to become a calmer, more enlightened version of yourself before we finish.

[PAUSE]

Just get reasonably comfortable.

Sit down. Lie down. Lean against something. Keep your eyes open if that feels better, or let them close if you're comfortable doing that.

[PAUSE]

Notice one ordinary breath.

You don't need to make it deeper. Just notice the inhale... and the exhale.

[PAUSE]

If it feels comfortable, let your next exhale be a little slower.

Let your shoulders drop if they've apparently spent the day trying to become earrings.

[PAUSE]

BODY & THE PRESENT MOMENT

Notice where your body is supported right now.

The chair beneath you. The bed. The sofa. The floor. Whatever is holding your weight.

[PAUSE]

Notice one sound in the room.

Notice the temperature of the air against your skin.

Notice that, for this moment, you are here.

[LONGER PAUSE]

Now notice what's been taking up the most space in your head.

You don't need to analyse it. Just name it quietly to yourself.

[PAUSE]

A conversation. A worry. A job that needs doing. Something you're angry about. Something you're waiting for. Or maybe just the general fucking noise of having a brain.

[PAUSE]

Whatever it is, let it sit beside you for a minute instead of directly on top of you.

THE PINK-LIGHT RESET

If visualisation works for you, imagine a warm pink light around you.

Not magical. Not fixing you. Just a visual boundary around this pause.

[PAUSE]

Imagine the light getting a little brighter as you breathe normally.

Everything outside it can wait for a few minutes.

[LONGER PAUSE]

Now ask yourself:

What actually belongs to right now?

[PAUSE]

Not the whole week.

Not every possible outcome.

Not the thing somebody else might think or do.

Just right now.

[LONGER PAUSE]

If you want a phrase to come back to, use this:

I rise. I heal. I soar.

Not because everything is suddenly fixed.

Because I can pause. I can recover. And I can choose my next step.

COMING BACK

Let the image fade whenever you're ready.

Notice the surface supporting you again.

Listen for one ordinary sound.

Move your fingers or toes if you want to.

[PAUSE]

Before you move on, ask yourself one final question:

What do I need next?

[LONGER PAUSE]

Maybe you need action.

Maybe you need food, water, rest, information, a conversation, a boundary, distraction, company - or five more bloody minutes.

[PAUSE]

You don't need the whole plan.

Just the next useful thing.

[PAUSE]

When you're ready, bring your attention fully back to the room.

Open your eyes if they were closed.

Take your time getting up.

[PAUSE]

Thank you for showing up for yourself.

Rise. Heal. Soar.

AFTER RECORDING: QUICK QUALITY CHECK

Can every word be heard clearly?

Did I leave enough silence, or did I panic and sprint through every pause?

Does my voice sound like me rather than a meditation app hostage situation?

Did any sentence feel awkward when spoken aloud?

Are the volume levels consistent?

Does the background sound support the recording rather than fighting it?

Would I personally tolerate listening to this when already stressed?

If the answer to the last one is no, fix that before worrying about whether the bloody music has enough wind chimes.

OPTIONAL LISTENER REFLECTION

What was taking up the most space before I started?

What do I notice now?

Did anything in the meditation help?

Was there anything I disliked or wanted to skip?

What do I need next?

What is one useful action I can take from here?

You don't have to feel calm for the reset to have been useful. Sometimes interrupting the spiral for five minutes is enough.

MAKE THE SCRIPT YOUR OWN

Which lines sound most naturally like me?

Which words would I change before recording?

Do I want the pink-light section, or a non-visual alternative?

How long do I want the final recording to be?

Would I create a 2-minute and a 5-minute version?

What intro/outro music, if any, fits FlamingoRise without becoming aggressively spa-like?

Where will this recording live - Rise Hub, workbook bundle, course, member area?

A FINAL FLAMINGORISE NOTE

The job of a guided meditation is not to make somebody feel exactly what the script tells them to feel.

It's to offer enough structure, space and permission for them to notice where they are - and maybe leave with one more useful option than they had five minutes earlier.

No fake serenity required.

Rise. Heal. Soar.
